Discovering Story Magic

A Three-Step Method to Writing a Story They Can't Refuse

In the remote reaches of the Southwest, three authors have journeyed to a cabin. They draw curious stares at their provisions of white boards, sticky notes, and legal pads. Cabin managers approach the cabin quietly, leaving stacks of towels, fire starters, and extra packages of coffee just outside the door. They dare not enter. Something strange is going on here. They've heard whoops of joy from inside. The cabin seems transformed somehow, enveloped in mystery.

They're right. Because inside that cabin, magic happens.

Praise for Discovering Story Magic

By using the character, conflict and plot development techniques of "Discovering Story Magic," you can be confident, even before page one, that you've got a powerful, well-constructed story. It's one of the most effective workshops I've ever attended.

—Jane Graves, 2002 2-time Rita Nominee, I GOT YOU BABE (Ballantine), w/a Jane Sullivan, THE MATCHMAKER'S MISTAKE (Harlequin)

The workshop really hit home. At last, a versatile way to organize my plots and the emotions that go with them. I really needed that!"

I have no doubt that without this workshop I would still be unpublished and floundering around without the directional tools these wonderful ladies gave me.

—Renee Halverson, EXTREME MEASURES (Leisure)

I can honestly say, this class is "doing it" for me as no other. I absolutely can't stop writing ... what a difference! It's all clicking, my WIP is sailing off into dreamworld. Wow. I can't thank you enough.
